JAPAN NEEDS HER WARSHIPS. Marquis Ito Regrets His Government Cannot Sell to Us. A special to the New York Herald from

Tokio yesterday says: I visited Marquis Ito today and asked would sell the cruisers 'Kasagi and Chitose to the United States. The premier hesitated a moment and replied: "I will make inquiry of my naval col-league, but I think I may say that Japan prefers to get possession of all the ships building for her as soon as possible. Ofil-Kasagi and Chitese to Japan, and the build-ers have been requested to hasten their completion." After a pause the marquis continued, slowiy and impressively:

"The news of the last few days indicates a critical state of affairs elsewhere than on the western continent, and we consider it only prudent to continue our preparations for the national defense which we had the forestburght to begin a love, time at the forestburght to begin a love, time at the continue of the state forethought to begin a long time ago. I hope the people of the United States will not take offense at Japan's unwillingness not take offense at Japan's unwillingness to part with these cruisers. I have always appreciated their kindly feeling for Japan. The United States is the nation above all others where public sentiment absolutely controls the national policy, and for that reason I wish to have the people there understand that Japan retains the Kasagi and Chitose, not from a lack of willingness to oblige the United States, but because she needs them herself."

A PRINCE THEIR GUEST. Members of a Bible Class Entertain Distinguished Corean.

The New York Avenue Presbyterian Church has a Bible class composed entirely of High School students, and Friday night the young gentlemen gave a dinner in the rear rooms on the lower floor of the church.

The rooms were decorated very prettily with foliage plants and a profusion of cut with foliage plants and a profusion of cut flowers, while the cellings were covered with American flags. A Corean flag was also displayed, in honor of the prince, and a British flag, in recognition of Rev. James M. Gale, who was formerly a missionary in Corea, and who was also a guest, and Rev. E. Lawrence Hunt, who is assistant pastor of the church.

The menu cards were illuminated with Corean and American flags, and at the conclusion of the dirner Prince Eul Wha signed his autograph on each, both in the pepular Corean language and classic Chinese.

THE DEFENSE OF CUBA

Spanish Realize That It Will Be the Point of Attack.

Concentrating Warships at Havana-

Submarine Mines and Torpedoe Views of the Critics

Members of the diplomatic corps are eagerly scrutinizing the movements of the United States and Spain in the present International chess game involving the settlement of the Cuban complication. It seems to be accepted that, while both parties to the game are willing to leave the vital point at issue to the arbitrament of the sword, each is holding back for some overt act on the part of the other in the way of hostile provecation that would justify the other in the eyes of the civilized nations of the world in resorting to the employment of its full military and It is in accordance with this theory that the United States and Spain are each makthe United States and Spain are each making complete preparations for a vigorous response to any hostile movement on the part of the other. In the expectation hat the United States would probably begin operations in the event of war by an open assault on Havara, the Spanish authorities assault on Havara, the Spanish authorities are apparently devoting their best energies to perfecting the defenses of that port. In execution of this plan they have concentrated several of Spain's best warships in that harbor and have arranged to reinforce them with other men-of-war as soon as possible. A fleet of torped boats is already on its way there to assist in the general defense. the general defense

Criticised by Strategists. It is stated that the harbor defenses have been greatly strengthened in the last few months by improved fortifications at Moro Castle and Cabanas and also by the introduction of a system of submarine mines and torpedoes. Local strategists seriously question the wisdom of these steps. The majority are inclined to the belief that the Spaniards are putting their best vessels in a veritable cul de sac, from which escape would be almost impossible in case the United States should invest the harbor with the large and formidable fleet near at hand available for such a purpose. Even with the naval reinforcements said to be on the way to Havana, the total Spanish strength there would be decidedly less than that of the naval forces which the United States could put against it at short rotice.

According to neval experts, it would be an easy matter for Admiral Sceard's fleet at Tortugas to completely blockade the harbor of Havana and shut off the Span-ish vessels in the harbor from all com-munication with the outside world. In case they attempted to escape they would be sunk one by one and in be sunk one by one, and in case they re-mained their officers and crews would be subjected to slow starvation.

Food Supplies Intercepted. The island no longer affords the means of subsistence, and all food supplies from the outside world would be ffeetually checked by the blockading squadron. At least, this is the view of the case taken by many naval officers who have studied the situation, and it has every indication of plausibility. It is generally admitted, however, that all signs fail in war, just as they do in love, and that it is never a safe maxim to believe that the enemy will do exactly what you expect him to do. Consequently, the plan of bottling Spanish fleet in the harbor of Spanish fleet in the narbor of day and may not be so easy of accomplishment as it appears. The Spaniards evidently know what they are about, and it is hardly credible that they would knowingly place themselves in a position where all the chances

Relations With Spain

Unless the court of inquiry investigating the cause of the destruction of the battle ship Maine shall report that the Spanish government is responsible, directly or indirectly, for that most deplorable episode, there is said to be no tangible reason for a termination of the friendly relations existing between the United States and Spain If Spain is absolved from all complicity in that disaster it is represented that the present conditions will remain unchanged unless one nation or the other does something to provoke the other beyond the bounds of endurance. Consequently the controlling influences in both countries are devoting their best energies for the avoidance of any action that can possibly be regarded as hostile or offensive to the other. In the present excited state of the people of both countries it is realized that war can only be averted by the most careful and conservative action. The progress of events alone can determine whether war is necessary to settle the issues which have already strained the relations of the two countries to the utmost tension.

The President's Policy. that disaster it is represented that the pres-

The President's Policy. It is these considerations which cause President McKinley to proceed slowly and deliberately in the formulation and execution of plans for alleviating the terrible situation in Cuba. Although he has practically concluded that the active interven-tion of the United States is the only possition of the United States is the only possible way of ending the insurrection on the island, he is somewhat embarrassed as to how he shall proceed in that direction without giving offense to a friendly nation and seemingly justify the claim that he provoked that nation into a war in defense of its sovereign rights. There is no question in his mind that Spain is unable to put down the insurrection, and that the Cubans are clearly entitled to the right of self-government. He is willing to heed the repeated advice of Congress and employ the full force of the government for the restoration of peace in Cuba, but he does not see clearly how such a thing can be accomplished in the present state of affairs without his being put in the attitude of provokbim whether the Japanese government plished in the present state of affairs with-out his being put in the attitude of provok-ing Spain into war in defense of one of its colonies. It is acknowledged that the strength of the position of Spain lies in the fact that she is determined to do nothing that can be construed as an unfriendly act toward the United States, and that if war results it will be because it was made in-evitable by interference in its national af-fairs.

fairs. Opinions of Diplomats.

Diplomats agree that the active interference of the United States in the Cuban revolution would be a casus belli, according to international law, and that Spain could not tamely submit to it without loss of honor. They admit, however, that anything less than forcible intervention, for instance, the recognition of the belligerency or independence of the insurgents, would not ecessarily be regarded as hostile acts justifying a resort to arms. The belief is general in diplomatic circles that while the President earnestly desires to end the ter-President earnestly desires to end the terrible distress prevailing in Cuba, he is equally anxious to avoid giving cause for a war with Spain, and therefore, unless ample cause for such intervention in Cuba is found in the case of the Maine, it is asserted that he is not likely under present conditions to go beyond a recognition of the Independence of the Cuban republic.
